

A CHECKLIST FOR STRONG PUBLIC PROCUREMENT

Public procurement matters.

When open, fair and sustainable, it will better serve the people and protect the planet. We need a strong public procurement resolution at UNCAC to ensure this can happen.

Right now, public procurement is broken.

One in three dollars is spent on public contracts, yet, too many governments don't seem to know what they are buying and selling, for how much, when and with whom they are dealing. It's government's number one corruption risk.

It can be fixed through open contracting.

Here is our checklist for a strong resolution at UNCAC so that all our communities can benefit from better schools, hospitals and sustainable infrastructure.

One rulebook:

One single clear rulebook across the whole of government.

Electronic:

An integrated electronic procurement system from planning to procurement to payment.

Participatory:

Participation of public stakeholders including civil society, business, academia & media.

Gender:

Empower women to increase public procurement integrity and fairness.

Transparent:

Procurement procedures, methods and criteria must be open and publicly available.

Open data:

An automated corruption risk indicator system based on standardized open data.

Beneficial ownership:

Data on companies' ultimate beneficial owners connected to public procurement data.
